WHAT MEN'S CLUB MEANS TO ME

The Men's Club is a group of brothers doing things we love to do, where a byproduct is helping others and bringing a community together. It's a way to find new lifelong friends as well as bridge the gap between the older and the younger members. It's a social club where we can sit around and shoot the breeze about life, religion or even politics. It's the fraternity that I never joined in college. It's a way for me to get my kids more involved in synagogue life by showing them how rewarding it is to help and be involved. It's a way for me to expand my Jewish identity by being more involved in religious activities at the synagogue."

Mazel Tov to Greg Fisher, Temple Sinai's honoree for Man of the Year!

REASON FOR THIS AWARD

He's often the first guy to arrive and among the last to leave Men's Club events. Greg's plate in life is large and he likes it piled high. We'll never underestimate his appetite for extremes, especially when that legendary plate is filled with fried chicken wings, because our honoree also happens to be the celebrated winner of the 2013 Temple Sinai Wingbowl in the Sukkah!

Greg answers the many calls to volunteer outside of Temple Sinai as well. He's coached countless hockey seasons for his nephews and sons. Despite working in Manhattan several days each week, he also manages to coach his kids' soccer, tee ball and lacrosse even through those never-ending hockey seasons. Greg loves working with kids and it shows in his style of coaching. Upper Dublin, PA is grateful to have such a dedicated and level-headed person on their sports fields.

Greg's commitment to kids extends beyond his own family and local community when he volunteers for Habitat for Humanity programs. Just this past year, Greg put that limitless patience to work by leading underprivileged NY school children in painting a mural and learning science through an exploding volcano project. Greg's heart is as large as his willingness to get his hands dirty!
